If sticks available locally they can be used in emergency situation, mindful of environmental concerns related to depleting the remaining natural forest resources in the country, the already done damage by the floods and the potential for community tensions between displaced and host communities the Emergency Shelter Cluster is suggesting that agencies should provide along with tarpaulins and shelter tool kits outlined above:

In Malawi 4 x 2 – app 6m long beams are most commonly available in the market. Therefore 3 such beams should be provided along with the tarpaulins and shelter tool kits mentioned above.

Agencies should source wood supplies only through sustainable forest resource supplies, readily available in the country.

Training:

Communities will need support through staff/volunteers, trained on the use of shelter kits and materials provided by agencies. Materials should not just be handed out without prior or parallel training to affected population.
